Proprietress' Desk

Welcome to Yomfield Nursery and Primary School!

My name is Chief (Mrs.) Hope Olayinka Jiboku. Twenty-five years ago, I became the Head of School cum Founder of this wonderful citadel of learning. So much happens within a school community of this magnitude, so it is difficult to convey all that YOMFIELD is to you in a brief such as this, but there are three features I frequently use to describe this school: what we teach, how we teach, and the overall setting where everything takes place.

WHAT WE TEACH

Many conventional schools largely focus on academics. Other schools, such as science schools, target the science driven world. At YomField, pupils get both and even far beyond that! We expect our products to advance into well established and high standards secondary schools, so they need to be prepared academically. At the same time, we know that our world is experiencing a period of dramatic change; young people need to be creatively adept and morally sound to capitalize on opportunities as well as to come up with innovative solutions to complex problems. We strongly believe that the combination of these three domains: academic excellence, moral uprightness and exceptional creativity will make our pupils become independent thinkers and problem solvers with long

HOW WE TEACH

Each day, I witness something astonishing – highly experiential learning that ignites curiosity and joy in our pupils. It is given different nomenclatures like learning by doing, experiential learning, play-way method et.c, because it actively engages the pupils in the learning process.

THE OVERALL SETTING

OUR WELL-STRUCTURED CURRICULUM

At Yomfield School, we operate a “Curriculum of Breadth, Balance and Quality”. The academic work is guided by educational principles of the Nigerian curriculum, blended with the British curriculum. Learning in the Elementary Section is enriched with the Cambridge Primary curriculum in Numeracy, Literacy and Science while the Day-Care and Nursery Sections enjoy a functional play-way system of learning as supervised by seasoned professionals. We adopt different learning techniques to facilitate and enhance better understanding of learners. Our teachers are seasoned, experienced and certified professionals. With them, the learners develop standard academic prowess, which has over time made the learners to perform excellently in both their internal and external examinations.
